REGAL LUXURY

Produced exclusively in the Champagne region of France from which it takes its name, by process of inducing an in-bottle secondary fermentation to effect carbonation.

The primary grapes used in the production of Champagne are Chardonnay, Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier.

Champagne first gained world renown because of its association with the anointment of French Kings. Royalty throughout Europe spread the message of the unique sparkling wine from Champagne and its association with luxury and power.

The leading manufacturers devoted considerable energy to creating a history and identity for their wine, associating it and themselves with Nobility and Royalty. Through advertising and packaging they sought to associate Champagne with high luxury, festivities and rites of passage.

Their efforts coincided with the emergence of a middle class who were looking for ways to spend its money on symbols of upward mobility.

The flavour of the finished product is created from a selection of different whiskies, and whiskies are sometimes aged again after blending.

The word whisky derives from the gaelic uisgea beatha' meaning water of life.

The many flavours found in different whiskies around the world are affected by the local water, type of grain, the way that grain is processed, the method of distillation, the ageing process and, of course, blending.

When you see the designation 100% single malt scotch whisky, the whisky is made with only malted barley, and the word single means the whisky is the output of a single malt distillery in one season.
