WINES INFLUENCED BY WATER

Wines influenced by the sea have a real freshness and purity, making them the perfect partner to our local seafood. The soils are packed with fossilized shells which, when combined with the salty influence of the sea, helps to create wines of real character. The cooling influence of oceans, rivers & lakes also enables the Holy Grail of balance in wines, bringing mouth-watering acidity that will draw you back in, sip after sip.

Muscadet sur Lie, La Griffé, Chéreau Carré - C Loire France 31

The original shellfish wine. Although coastal the wine takes its name from the two rivers running through the region. This is a 'Sur Lie' style which means the wine sits on the yeast cells for 6 months to add extra richness. It's this richness, when married with the grape's bracing acidity, that make it the perfect dance partner to our shellfish.

Picpoul de Pinet, Heritage An 1618, Gérard Bertrand - C Languedoc France 37

Picpoul actually means 'lip stinger' in the local dialect due to the wines firm acidity. The vineyards border the Thau lagoon which is home to some of Frances finest Oysters & Mussels. So guess what we recommend drinking this little beauty with?

Malvazija, Kozlović - C Istria Croatia 39

On a clear day you can see straight across the Adriatic to St Mark's Square Venice from this vineyard, so it's definitely coastal. Its zesty, mineral rich, and has a lovely citrus peel character which combines well with the wines natural saltiness. They love to grill fish in Croatia so it's no surprise this wine works so well with our menu.

Nautilus, Aged under Water, Foivos - R  Kefalonia Greece 41

Not only is the vineyard within 800m of the sea, the wine is also then aged under water. This wine is quite simply unbelievable and will taste like nothing you've ever experienced. If you could imagine drinking Alsace Muscat in a rock pool then you'll have a rough idea of style. In simpler terms imagine zesty marmalade, stony minerality, and wonderful salinity on the finish. Finally this wine is naturally made, so will evolve nicely in the glass.

Lugana, Ella, Ancilla Lugana - C Lombardy Italy 46

Sitting on the banks of Lake Garda, Lugana is Italy's dry white wine secret. Made with the native grape Turbiano it balances a fresh lake breeze, with zesty grapefruit fruit and a subtle floral perfume. A thrilling alternative to Pinot Grigio and Soave, it's easy to see why this wine has become a firm favorite with sommeliers all over the world.

Albariño, O Con, Xosé Lois Sebio - R Rias Baixas Spain 58

Albarino is influenced by the sea but more so by the many estuaries and inlets of the region. At its best Albarino is wonderfully aromatic with layers of white peach but this wine has added complexity due to the use of old oak. So stylistically this wine is a mid-way point between Albarino and white Burgundy.

Assyrtiko, Clay, Gaia Wines ORANGE - R Santorini Greece 66

Assyrtiko is without question one of the finest white wines in the world. Ancient vines grown on volcanic soil with extreme exposure to the Aegean sea helps give these wines a unique character. Yiannis from Gaia has taken this a stage further by macerating on the skins for seven days, and then ageing in clay spheres for four years. This results in a richly textured orange wine of dried tropical fruit and honeycomb but still holds onto a dry mineral finish.
